A Sales Tax & Payroll Tax Fairytale

Once upon a time there was a prince who lived with a beautiful princess. Their life together was a perfect fairytale, or so they thought. You see, before marrying the princess, the prince was a commoner who worked as a carpenter. As a carpenter, he built many houses in the village they now rule together. While he was a carpenter, he was unaware of the fact that he should have been paying or self-assessing use tax on all of his materials. He also was not aware that he should be paying payroll taxes for his employees. It wasn't until five years prior to meeting the princess that he learned of this obligation through an audit by the evil sorcerers named The Bad Maxes. Through this audit, he was held as a responsible person and owed The Bad Maxes more money than he could ever afford. Since he could not afford to pay his assessments, the man decided to ignore the assessments and hoped it would go away.

When he had not heard from the sorcerers in several years, he thought his debt had been forgotten, but he was wrong. On a cold night in December, he was visited by The Bad Maxes and an evil spell was cast upon him until he paid his debts. This evil spell turned him into a frog. As a frog, he could no longer live his life as he once did. The Bad Maxes took his livelihood away from him.

Not knowing what else to do, the princess went to the knights' brotherhood, Sales Tax Defense, and begged them for help in defeating The Bad Maxes's evil spell on her husband. The knights quickly developed a plan. They would settle the debts owed to The Bad Maxes through a program called the Offer-In-Compromise Program. Through this program, The Bad Maxes would agree to settle the debts for a piece of the prince's income and the value of his assets. Since before marrying the princess the man was a commoner, he had no assets in his name; all of the assets were the princess's.

The princess agreed that this was the best approach to undoing the evil spell. The knight's brotherhood submitted the proper paperwork to The Bad Maxes. After waiting several months for the paperwork to be reviewed and after going to battle about the ownership of the assets, it was agreed that the debt should be settled for much less than the amount owed. The princess and her husband paid the settlement to The Bad Maxes and the evil spell was lifted. The prince was turned from a frog back into a prince and the princess and her husband were able to live their lives together the way that they had always planned, Happily Ever After.

Success Story

Sales Tax Defense LLC had a client who owed sales tax and payroll tax to both the New York State Department of Taxation and Finance and the Internal Revenue Service from an ownership in a business from several years ago. The liabilities had been chasing this taxpayer for many years and the taxpayer wanted to clean up the liabilities so he could go on living his life without having to worry about New York State and the IRS taking his assets and his money.

Sales Tax Defense worked with the client to compile all of the necessary paperwork to file Offers-In-Compromise with both New York State and the IRS. After waiting 14 months for the New York State offer to be assigned to the reviewer, Sales Tax Defense negotiated a sales tax settlement for the taxpayer of $65,000 on assessments totaling approximately $145,000. That is a settlement for less than 45% of the amount due. After the IRS offer was reviewed, Sales Tax Defense and the taxpayer decided to appeal the offer. After debating with the IRS appeals officer in regards to the new policies the IRS has put into place, the payroll tax liability was ultimately settled for $172,000 on assessments totaling approximately $700,000. That is a settlement for less than 25% of the amount due!
