

TUPPERWARE

It's the most wonderful time of the year! Family, friends, presents and lots of memories. As we gather together to celebrate the joys of life and listen to the laughter of children, we create memories that last a lifetime. We take hundreds of pictures and videos. We upload those pictures to the Internet, we share them on social media, and even print a few photos to make albums or put over the fireplace.

The whole reason we take a picture is so that we can look at it at some future date and remember the warmth and happiness of that moment. Of course, if you can't find the photo, the iPhone it was on is lost, or if you lose the access to that online website you might forever lose that photograph. That's part of the reason why I'm such a big fan of printing pictures. A piece of paper never crashes, but could get lost or destroyed. That's also why I love Tupperware bins.

I know for a fact that at some point in the next 20 years my basement is going to leak. I've sealed the walls, I had drywells built around the house, and even had a French drain dug. Even with all of that, I know that something will go wrong at some point in the future. So I keep my old pictures and albums in sealed Tupperware containers on a metal storage rack at least 2 feet off the ground.

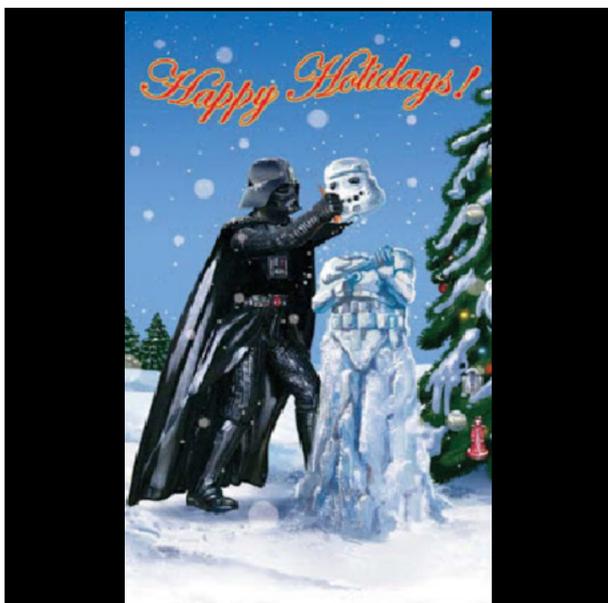

20 years from now I want to be able to show my children (who are 7 and 10), and (hopefully) my grandchildren, pictures of my grandparents and how I celebrated holidays with them when I was a child. I would recommend to everyone to take a few simple precautions to safeguard those memories and to protect those photo albums.

Your business records are no different. I have too many clients whose records were destroyed by a flood in their basement or a malfunctioning sprinkler system. Of course, they are always the victim of a sales tax audit. And, of course, the Grinch of a sales tax auditor always believes that the client intentionally destroyed their records. And then they always issue a ridiculous tax bill with penalties and interest.

Whether it's your personal photos or your business records those pieces of paper have tremendous emotional or financial value. Take a few simple common sense steps to safeguard those records.

May the coming year bring you and your family nothing but health and happiness. And a very special thank you to all of our clients and fellow professionals, who have entrusted Sales Tax Defense LLC for advice or to help resolve a problem.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS!

On behalf of the team of Sales Tax Defense we would like to wish everyone a happy and peaceful holiday season. May your time with your family bring you joy and may the force be with you in the New Year!

ABOUT THE FIRM

We are a dedicated team of sales and use tax professionals who have committed our careers to helping businesses and fellow professionals with sales and use tax problems.

Since the only work we are focused on is sales tax consulting, businesses never have to be concerned that we will try to sell them other services they do not need. And professionals never have to be concerned with us encroaching on their client relationships, because we view you, our fellow professional, as our client.
